MEN A HUNDRED YEARS OLD .- In noticing a book entitled Human Longevity; or, The Art of Prolonging One's Life, by Dr. Foissat, the Paris correspondent of the London Times says: "One of the author's most distinguished colleagues, Dr. Despaulx-Ader, has published an account of this book, which is of rare interest, and in which I find that in 1819, among 60,000,000 inhabitants, Russia counted 1,780 centenarians, of whom two were 160 years old; France counted 150 out of a population of 38,-000,000; Poland, 90 to 4.500,000; Sweden, 17; Norway, 40; the United States, 2,618; Canada, 72, in a population of about 2,000,000; and that in England 105 centenarians died every year. Dr. Despaulx finds, too, that the greatest number of these centenarians were rather poor than rich, peasants generally, soldiers, or priests. It is evident that it would be very hard to draw any conclusions from these observations, and attribute these cases of longevity to particular causes, since they occur in all parts of Europe -since a life of ease is not one of the causes, and neither the freedom of institutions nor the mildness of climate seem to contribute to it in any way. Dr. Despaulx, however, says that life appears to be longer where the population is least numerous. This observation is not in able. Cheaper than Soap. favor of the reciprocal affection which animates humanity, and does not absolutely prove that it is necessary for a man to live to a great age that his fellow-men should walk on his toes; but in any case, if this observation is correct, it ought to console the Parisians just now, for it is not crowding that will prevent them from reaching the 160 years of the two old Russians mentioned in the statistics.

A JOURNEY UNDER CHLOROFORM. - The London Laucet of August 15 says: "A novel, very interesting, and useful application of chloroform has just been made by Dr. Squarey, of the Soho Hospital. A lady had been subjected to an examination under chloroform on Tuesday last. The husband of the patient wished to move her as soon as possible to her home at Norwood, but in her then condition of pain and exhaustion a journey was out of the question. The advisability of her return being urged by her friends, it was proposed to perform the journey under chloroform; and this was actually HAND accomplished on Wednesday. The patient was atæthetized in her bed in George street, Hanover square, having no knowledge of her impending journey. She was then carried down stairs and placed in an invalid carriage, driven HAND to her home at Norwood, and taken out and carried up stairs to her own bed, without at any time actually recognizing she was on her way home. The journey occupied an hour and a half, and the patient was under chloroform
